

American Association of Philosophy Teachers

“Anti-racist Philosophy Pedagogy”

Call for Presenters

Application Deadline July 1, 2020

The American Association of Philosophy Teachers (AAPT) is seeking speakers for a panel discussion on anti-racist teaching, facilitated by Manuel Chávez of Monmouth University. This panel will be part of our virtual workshop-conference, “AAPT 2020: Anti-Racist and Pandemic Pedagogies,” to be held July 22-24, 2020 in place of our previously planned gathering at Otterbein University (now postponed until the summer of 2021).

Possible topics include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Anti-racist and inclusive course design
- Facilitating class discussions on race and identity
- Racism and education technology
- Anti-racist and inclusive syllabus language and course policies
- Anti-racist learning outcomes in philosophy classes
- Decolonizing curricula

If you are interested in being a panelist, please submit a proposal of 150-200 words in which you explain your interest in participating and the expertise you would bring to the conversation. The AAPT will provide to each panelist a modest honorarium and a free membership for new members.

Proposals are due by July 1, 2020 and should be sent to Manuel Chavez at mchavez@monmouth.edu.